DON DeJARDIN

IRV KOSLOFF . . .

is president-owner of the 76ers and president of Roosevelt Paper Company, one of America's largest firms in the paper supply business. He is the 76ers' representative on the National Basketball Association's Board of Governors. He teamed with the late Ike Richman to bring NBA basketball back to Philadelphia after the Warriors had moved to San Francisco prior to the 1962-63 season. "Kos" and "Ike" purchased the Syracuse Nats and installed them in Philadelphia as "The 76ers" for the 1963-64 season. With the death of Richman at a game in Boston in 1965, "Kos" became more active in running the team and even now can always be found at courtside at home games and many of the road contests. He helped put together the combination that won three division championships and the 1966-67 world championship team. In 1966, he hired Jack Ramsay as general manager, relieving some of his front-office press of business. However, he has maintained a close hand in overseeing the entire organization and remains an owner with an avid interest in his team. Mr. Kosloff is a graduate of South Philadelphia (Southern) High and Temple University. He is 57 and he and Mrs. Kosloff have two married children and three grandchildren.

DON DeJARDIN . . .

his appointment as general manager of the Philadelphia 76ers on August 4 marked a return to familiar places for the West Point graduate, Class of 1958. DeJardin lived in the Philadelphia area for about a year, while he was employed at Westinghouse's Lester (Pa.) plant, in a purchasing function of the Naval Nuclear Program. He left in January 1969, to work with Jim Gardner in taking over the Houston Mavericks' franchise in the ABA. In April, 1969, Gardner's group moved the franchise to North Carolina where, through a plan devised earlier by DeJardin, the Cougars were formed into a state-wide team playing home games in Charlotte, Greensboro, and Raleigh. DeJardin's first contact with professional basketball came in April, 1967, while he was working with Westinghouse in Pittsburgh.

At that time, the ABA was about to form and Pittsburgher Gabe Rubin sought DeJardin's services. As Director of player personnel, DeJardin helped gather the players and signed their first coach—Vince Cazzetta. The Pipers won the first ABA title but DeJardin had left in mid-season to transfer to Westinghouse in Lester. DeJardin was born on January 29, 1936, in Forest Hills, New York. He attended Bishop Loughlin High in Brooklyn, then entered the United States Military Academy at West Point, N. Y., where he earned two letters in baseball and three in basketball. He captained the Cadets in his senior season, 1957-58. DeJardin and his wife, the former Sondra Kameron, have three girls and one boy—Laura, 10; Bryn, 9; Julia, 8; and Bradford, 4.

JACK RAMSAY

In the ever-changing scope of professional basketball, it is necessary to have a coach who can keep up with the times. The Philadelphia 76ers have one in Jack Ramsay who, in fact, has helped mold some of the new-look as it pertains to the National Basketball Association. After two years as 76ers' general manager and two more years as combination coach and general manager, Ramsay is back to his first love—full-time coach. In his two seasons as coach, the 76ers have won 97 and lost 67. His first campaign (1968-69) saw the 76ers post a surprising 55-27 record, surprising since Wilt Chamberlain had been dealt to the Los Angeles Lakers and Luke Jackson, his replacement, suffered a crippling injury in the year. Like most of the National Basketball Association's new-breed of coaches, Ramsay stresses defense in his teachings—and yet, ironically, his teams have led the league in scoring the two seasons he has been coach. The hustling, ball-handling, pressing defense and the scoring of such sharpshooters as Bill Cunningham, Hal Greer and Archie Clark combined to carry the 76ers to such lofty scoring heights.

When Ramsay left St. Joseph's College after a successful 11-year career at the Philadelphia school, he thrust himself into his new role as general manager. When Alex Hannum resigned as coach after the 1967-68 season, Ramsay assumed his dual position, holding it for two seasons before relinquishing the GM post to concentrate on coaching. Despite his two-year absence from the coaching line, Ramsay fit right back into the mold when he took over for the 1968-69 season. In his 11 seasons at St. Joseph's, the Hawks won 234 and lost 72, winning or sharing seven Philadelphia Big Five championships and playing in 10 major post-season tournaments. Ramsay spent part of the summer of 1970 in Rome, teaching basketball fundamentals to young Italian players and drilling the coaches on various aspects of the game. Ramsay also had served as athletic director and teacher at St. Joseph's. He earned his Master's Degree and Doctorate in Education at the University of Pennsylvania. He is 45 and he and his wife, Jean, have five children.

A HISTORY BY BOB VETRONE

"When the Philadelphia Warriors were introduced before last night's basketball game with Pittsburgh, a rangy lad ambled onto the court at the announcement of "Joe Fulks." A wisecracker in the crowd of 4,185 drew a short laugh with the query "Where did he come from?" And that was the question still being asked when the fans made for the exit after watching the Warriors win a thrilling 81-75 victory to get off to a successful start in the newly-formed Basketball Association of America. This same Joe Fulks stole the show by scoring 25 points in addition to playing a brilliant floor game." . . . By Ray Kelly, Philadelphia Bulletin, November 8, 1946.

Thus, modern professional basketball was introduced to Philadelphia 25 years ago and players like Fulks, George Senesky, Angy Musi, Howard Dallmar, Fred Sheffield, Jerry Fleishman, Jerry Rullo, Johnny Murphy, Matt Guokas, Petey Rosenberg and Art Hillhouse, under the coaching of Eddie Gottlieb and Cy Kaselman and the direction of Pete Tyrell, started another chapter in the Quaker City's already-rich sports heritage.

The Warriors won that game and 34 others to finish second to the Washington Caps in the BAA's Eastern Division. Then, the Warriors defeated the St. Louis Bombers, the New York Knicks and the Chicago Stags to become the league's first champion.

Things weren't always going to be as successful as that first season. Indeed, the franchise was to run into much difficulty before being rescued by Gottlieb in 1953 with his purchase of it from The Arena for a reported $20,000.

Then, after the 1961-62 campaign, Gottlieb sold the team to San Francisco and the end seemed near for pro basketball here.

After a lapse of one season, however, the National Basketball Association (a merger of the BAA and the National League) returned to Philadelphia when, in the spring of 1963, Irv Kosloff and the late Ike Richman teamed to purchase the Syracuse Nats' franchise and bring it here. The team was re-named the 76ers and Dolph Schayes was appointed coach.

Before the Warriors left, though, they were to win another championship—in 1955-56, with Senesky the coach and Tom Gola, now the City Controller, a rookie sparkplug.

In their fourth season in the league, the 76ers brought the third modern title to the city.

On April 24, 1967, the 76ers, coached by Alex Hannum, beat San Francisco, 125-122, for their fourth victory in six games.

When Chet Walker converted two free throws with two seconds left in San Francisco's Cow Palace, he sealed the victory—a victory that climaxed a spectacular season.

It was a season in which the 76ers won a record 68 regular-season games; overcame a first-game stunner and knocked Cincinnati out of the first-round playoffs; knocked out the Celtics in five games and finished it with their workmanlike job in overcoming the stubborn Warriors.

A crowd of 15,612 in San Francisco, several thousand more across the bay watching on closed-circuit TV in Oakland and countless thousands back East saw Hannum's powerful frontline and sharpshooting backcourt pull out the sixth game of the final playoff series and prevent the necessity of playing the final contest back in Philadelphia the next night.

The celebration that followed immediately after the game and the rousing airport reception in Philadelphia the next afternoon were icing on the championship cake for the players, each of whom received $7,186.66.

Their biggest exultation came on the court, where they had shown the ability that had led Hannum to describe them as "members of the greatest basketball team ever assembled, and they proved it with their tremendous record of 68-13."

The assembling of the title team had achieved a gigantic boost when Wilt Chamberlain, who had gone to San Francisco with the Warriors' franchise, was brought home in a trade that sent Paul Neumann, Connie Dierking and Lee Shaffer to San Francisco. That was in the middle of the 1964-65 season.

In 1965-66, Wilt became the greatest scorer in league history when he pushed over the 20,000 mark.

Wilt helped the team to the 1966-67 title and was a valuable performer again in 1967-68. But then things began to happen.

Hannum left the organization, after compiling the most successful two-year coaching mark in N.B.A. history (130-33 plus 18-10 in the playoffs).

Chamberlain was traded to the Los Angeles Lakers for center Darrall Imhoff, All-Star guard Archie Clark and forward Jerry Chambers.

Shortly thereafter, Jack Ramsay, who had been general manager for two years, added the coaching duties to his job.

He guided the 76ers to a 55-27 record and a second-place finish in the NBA's rugged Eastern Division. They achieved this despite the fact that Luke Jackson, the heir to the center job when Wilt was traded, was sidelined for the season on December 11 when he suffered a ruptured Achilles tendon.

Imhoff became the number one center and did a remarkable job, reaching the peak of his career in the playoffs. His outstanding work wasn't enough to prevent a 4-1 loss to eventual champion Boston in the first round of the playoffs.

Bill Cunningham emerged as a star forward, finishing third in the league point race, and providing scoring help for veteran backcourt man Hal Greer, who continued to inch his way up the ladder in virtually all offensive departments.

Meanwhile, the 76ers continued to set attendance records at their Spectrum home court. A total of 399,800 fans saw the team play in Philadelphia—an average of nearly 11,000 fans per game.

Last season, with Jackson again besieged by injuries, the team fell to fourth place and was eliminated by Milwaukee, 4-1, in the Eastern Division semifinals.

After the season, Ramsay yielded the general manager portion of his duties to devote full time to coaching and full time to bringing the 76ers back up the ladder in the NBA.

Don DeJardin, a West Point graduate, took over as general manager in August.

ROOKIES

DENNIS AWTRY

The 6-10, 250-pound rookie from Santa Clara was one of the most pleasant surprises in a successful pre-season schedule. He shared the center position with Luke Jackson, playing almost equal time and showed up extremely well. He was the 76ers' third-round choice in the draft after completing a great three-season career under coach Dick Garibaldi with the Broncos.

In 85 games (of which Santa Clara won 73), Awtrey scored 1,675 points for an average of 19.7. In his senior year, he scored 614 for a 21.1 average and hauled down 409 rebounds.

AL HENRY

The 6-9 forward-center was the 76ers' surprising first-round draft choice after a two-year career at Wisconsin in which he scored 528 points and grabbed 366 rebounds in 45 games. Al led the Wisconsin Badgers in field goal percentage with 47.4 (152-321) and averaged five blocked shots a game. Injuries cut his sophomore season to one game. College coach John Powless feels experience in NBA or Eastern League will turn him into a fine pro.

CLUB NICKNAME

Walter Stahlberg, of West Collingswood, New Jersey, won a contest to name the club in 1963. The choice of the club's nickname was announced on August 6, 1963. There were almost 500 different suggestions among the entries and Stahlberg was one of several who picked the 76ers. However, his accompanying 25-word explanation was deemed the best by the judges, and he and his wife received an all-expense-paid trip to the West Coast to see the 76ers play San Francisco.

ANALYSIS OF IRON MEN

Twenty-four NBA players participated in all 82 games last season. Darrall Imhoff's streak was stopped at 323 games, so the new NBA leader in consecutive games played is Don Nelson of Boston with 274. He last missed a game Feb. 1, 1967. No. 2 man is Jack Marin of Baltimore with 267 straight, last missing Feb. 6, 1967. They are only active men to have three straight iron man seasons. Those with two in row are Elvin Hayes, Bob Weiss, and Wes Unseld. The others on list below have one perfect year going.

Los Angeles, Cincinnati and the 76ers didn't have a player who performed in every game last year. Here are clubs who did:

ATLANTA: Joe Caldwell, Bill Bridges, Walt Hazzard, Jim Davis

MILWAUKEE: Lew Alcindor, Jon McGlocklin, Greg Smith

BALTIMORE: Jack Marin, Earl Monroe, Wes Unseld

CHICAGO: Bob Love, Clem Haskins, Bob Weiss

SAN DIEGO: Elvin Hayes, John Block, Stu Lantz

NEW YORK: Dick Barnett, Dave Stallworth

BOSTON: Don Nelson, Bailey Howell

SEATTLE: Bob Boozer

DETROIT: Howie Komives

PHOENIX: Neal Walk

SAN FRANCISCO: Clyde Lee
